Kathleen Kennedy is an artist and educator currently living in Richmond, VA. She received her MFA from the University of Wisconsin – Madison. Kennedy is the Metals Area Coordinator and an Adjunct Instructor for the Department of Craft and Material Studies at Virginia Commonwealth University (VCU). Additional teaching includes the Haystack Mountain School of Craft in Deer Isle, Maine, the Penland School of Craft in North Carolina and Montgomery College in Rockville, MD. She is a board member of Ethical Metalsmiths and serves on the Education Committee. She is also Co-Director of Radical Jewelry Makeover, an international community mining and jewelry recycling project. RJM lays bare the social and environmental destruction of mining, inspiring artists to shift their practices towards sustainable solutions, and asking communities to radically alter their habits of consumption. Kennedy exhibits her work in Invitational and Juried exhibitions in both the U.S. and abroad.

Collaborative Research

Radical Jewelry Makeover - Abbreviated

Radical Jewelry Makeover (RJM) is collaborative project directed by Susie Ganch and Kathleen Kennedy. It is an educational outreach program of Ethical Metalsmiths, a non-profit organization whose mission is to "inspire responsible jewelry practices through education, connection and action." RJM is currently in its 15th year and has been hosted by communities all over the world. RJM helps to draw attention to complex environmental and human rights issues surrounding the field of jewelry, including but not limited to hard rock mining and excess waste in the costume jewelry industry. The project creates a transparent circular supply chain that starts at donors' jewelry boxes, asking community members to mine their collections and donate their old unwanted jewelry. Jewelers work as refiners and designers, transforming the donations into new Madeover pieces of jewelry, using environmental and human health as primary design criteria. The project culminates in a public exhibition, where made-over pieces are sold and make their way back out in to the community. RJM lays bare the social and environmental destruction of mining, inspiring artists to shift their practices towards sustainable solutions, and asking communities to radically alter their habits of consumption. Information listed below is collaborative and has occurred since Kennedy joined RJM's leadership unless noted.
